Metropolitan Community College is most effective when engaging with the community in the mutual exchange of ideas and expertise. Open and effective communications between the College and members of the business, professional, industrial and labor communities are paramount to the vitality and market-place relevance of the College's occupational/technical programs.

The President of the College may appoint committees with broad, diverse representation from the interested public to advise College personnel regarding instructional programs in specific occupational/technical areas.

The committees shall serve in an advisory capacity and have neither administrative nor policy making authority.

Terms of appointment to such committees shall not exceed three years, although members may be reappointed by the President to serve additional terms. The President shall annually notify the Board of Governors of the membership of advisory committees and if any committee(s) have ceased functioning.
